At this time we had a presidency consisting of Wm. M. Wall and two counselors, and Bishop J. C. Murdock and two counselors. Some misunderstanding occurred in regard to their duties and it was deemed advisable to drop the presidency; so Bishop Murdock was sustained as Bishop over the whole valley.

This was not the first time President Brigham Young visited the valley as some have supposed. In company with others he passed through in the summer of 1859, took dinner on Center Creek and called it Their Creek, this time he had a road-ometer on his carriage. I think his measurement was 26 miles from Provo to Center Creek and 18 miles to Kimball's Ranch.
